

Overly complex and inflexible contracts of employment limit many employers' ability to make changes in the workplace. This seminar, presented by Andrew Levy, will show you how to draft an effective and understandable employment contract that will meet the needs of the modern employer. The seminar will teach you how to protect your interests and make your employment documentation work for you.

Highlights include:

- Breaking the chains of contract
- Drafting for maximum flexibility
- Key clauses for every contract
- Clauses that are positively dangerous
- How to implement and introduce new contracts
- Other key employment documentation

There is a growing realisation that most contracts currently in use are of more value to employees rather than employers. We will show you how to remedy this and will also deal with the thorny issue of introducing new contracts, as well as streamlining your procedures to do away with unnecessary and costly practices that are simply not necessary. This is an important seminar, which will save your Company money, reduce its vulnerability, and enhance its staff flexibility.
